In 1990 60 000 PNG children had no schooling. Br. Graham Leech, Director of Callan Services, had a plan. Callan Services needed an operational base to support and train others. Children living on the Wewak Dump as well as those with a disability needed support.

Over the years special resources centres have been set up throughout Papua New Guinea. Callan Services' approach is simple: empower and support the local people to help themselves. They are trained to help the people from the villages who do not have the chance of receiving services from the government.

Tertiary students receive nationally recognized qualifications. Successful students who have a disability now want to give to others what they have received themselves.

Experts from outside PNG are much needed and greatly appreciated.

Through the work of Callan Services young people experience purpose and renewed life.
